To Whom it May Concern

I am pleased to offer my strong support for the work of Gallipoli Medical Research (GMR) and its ongoing commitment to improving the health and wellbeing of veterans, their families, and the wider community.

GMR plays an essential role in our region as a leader in veteran-focused medical research, driving evidence-based programs that address the complex physical, mental, and social challenges faced by those who have served. Their pioneering approach—guided by the voices and lived experience of veterans—ensures that services and solutions are relevant, practical, and capable of delivering lasting benefit.

I also commend GMR for its Cancer Wellness Program, which provides vital support to Queenslanders navigating the challenges of cancer diagnosis and treatment. This program exemplifies GMR's holistic, community-centred approach by offering education, psychosocial support, and practical tools that significantly improve quality of life for patients and their families.

Importantly, GMR's clinical trials capability gives local patients access to innovative and potentially life-saving treatments that may otherwise be out of reach. By partnering with clinicians and industry to deliver high-quality clinical trials, GMR brings cutting-edge therapies directly to our community—ensuring that Queenslanders, including veterans, benefit from the very latest medical advances.

GMR's work strengthens health outcomes and fosters meaningful collaboration between clinicians, researchers, veterans, community organisations, and healthcare providers. Their dedication to translating research into real-world programs ensures that the benefits of their work are felt across our region.

I applaud GMR's commitment to serving those who have served our nation and welcome any initiative that enhances their capacity to continue this important work. Their contribution to veteran health, clinical research, and community wellbeing is both highly valued and deserving of strong support.

I look forward to continuing to work with GMR as they expand their impact and deliver positive outcomes for veterans and families across Queensland.

Yours sincerely
